

Nobuyuki Hanaki (Osaka University)

“Cognitive ability and observed behavior in laboratory experiments: implications for macroeconomic theory”

Abstracts:

This paper discusses the relationships between the “measured” cognitive ability of participants and their behavior as observed during laboratory experiments. Based on such relationships, macroeconomic implications of micro-level “boundedly rational” individual behavior will be discussed.